Sacramento Regional Area Planning Commission

The Sacramento Regional Area Planning Commission is a council of four county and twelve city governments serving the entire Counties of Sacramento, Sutter, Yolo and Yuba. Four additional counties of El Dorado Placer, Nevada and Sierra and the cities therein are added for criminal justice planning.

The Commission membership consists of two representatives from each county; one appointed by the Board of Supervisors and one appointed by agreement among the cities of each county, except in Sacramento County where the City of Sacramento has one representative, and the Cities of Folsom, Isleton and Galt also have a city representative.

The Commission serves as an advisory agency to local government on items of interjurisdictional concern, and has developed a comprehensive program in physical, socio-economic, and criminal justice planning.

Introduction

Human services, contrary to the pronouncements of some, are not a new burden to local communities. Since the early 1700's the provision of human services has been a part of local government and the private sector. In fact, it has been estimated that in the early 1700's over 40 percent of the New York City budget was spent to support the poor house.

In the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries, the scope of human services grew slowly. Service was limited to support of widows, orphans, and the poor house. Some expansion did occur as a result of the Civil War and from epidemics. A few public hospitals were developed and programs were begun to provide foster care for children. These services were usually a combination of public and private agencies.

The early twentieth century saw slow growth in special purpose legislation and associated services. The first steps toward health and income security for veterans and limited public health service were taken. The U.S. Childrens Bureau was established, many states set up workmans compensation programs, pensions for the aged were developed, and a national vocational training program was created after World War I.

In the 1930's there was a rapid increase in the development of human service programs and activities. Social security; unemployment insurance; aid to the blind, widowed, aged, and dependant children; hospital construction; vocational traning; and expanded health services were all included in the expansion.

Between the 1930's and the early 1970's, local communities saw a virtual explosion of human service programs in the public and the private sectors, and it was widely recognized that the resulting complex of independant programs was literally out of control. Each program was organized independantly, had its own eligibility standards, served a selected client group, and was often administered by independant public agencies or Boards of Directors who were not locally accountable. The system became so confusing and so complex that it was necessary to establish special programs whose only service was to guide citizens to appropriate services within the maze of programs.

In the early 1970's, the concept of "New Federalism" was unveiled at the national level and used to place more emphasis on local decision making. The federal government began efforts to move decisions closer to the people thru the initiation of block grants and revenue sharing. These efforts placed greater responsibilities on local communities, local decision makers, and locally elected officials to develop efficient, effective, and coordinated services.

In the broad area of human services, these local decision-makers came face-to-face with a fragmented and confusing situation that was the result of years of piecemeal planning and decision-making. The result of these previously uncoordinated efforts was a grouping of independant sub-systems, made up of single purpose agencies with narrow areas of interest.

These sub-systems operated independantly of each other and were usually organized around a vertical relationship to a funding source, often a federal agency. Horizontal coordination with other agencies in a community was minimal, particularly in the significant areas of program planning, resource allocation, and program operation. A review of planning and funding allocation cycles of nine major sub-systems in Sacramento County in 1977 - 78 indicated that each of the nine sub-systems planned and allocated on individual cycles.

Attempts to gather information about these sub-systems and their activities were further confused by the fact that there was no single document or source of information which described the overall organization of the system. Few people, even those who had been involved in human services for a number of years, had a complete understanding of the organization of the sub-systems and how they were financed. Facing these problems, it is no wonder that local decision-makers were confused and perplexed. There was a general feeling that some type of coordination should be developed between the sub-systems.

Between 1975 and 1978, a number of coordinative efforts were begun. Some were focused on joint planning and funding by a few agencies, some attempted more energetic efforts by trying to coordinate a number of major sub-systems, and some attempted to develop county-wide human service plans which would bring all major sub-systems into a joint effort.

Many of these efforts had initial success in developing coordination between sub-systems; however, with the passage of Proposition 13 some of these efforts lost momentum. Many local agencies and subcontractors began to struggle for survival and program reductions began to occur. It appears that we are now entering a new period of evolution for human services, one which may be extremely difficult.

It appears that this new period will be characterized by increased demands for services, decreasing financial support, continuing fragmentation of services, and a basic questioning of the location of responsibility.

Purpose & Scope

This report is an attempt to provide basic information to local decision-makers regarding the organization of the human service system and its sub-systems, the flow of funding from a source to local service providers, and to list all services, programs or sub-contractors receiving funds.

This is a second generation report and builds on our first Human Service Funding Report (SRAPC 1977). The first report concentrated on the major flows of human service funding which were controlled by local decisions. This report has been substantially expanded and attempts to provide a much more comprehensive view of the extent of human service funding in this Region.

This report, and the information contained in it concerning funding, should fill a significant gap in information that has existed for years, but which has become much more important since the passage of Proposition 13.

In this era of diminishing funds, it is more important than ever to understand the human service sub-systems and the services they fund in order to avoid duplication, fill gaps in service, and make efficient allocation decisions.

There are some cautions concerning the use of this report and the figures contained in it. Although this report has been expanded over our initial effort, we are sure that some agencies and funds have been overlooked, and one large area of human service not included in this report are payments for Medi-Cal. The information in this report was gathered by contacting various federal, state, regional, and local agencies and asking for their cooperation. The figures are only as accurate as the information provided.

This report concentrates on the areas served by the Sacramento Regional Area Planning Commission; however, in obtaining figures for the City of Roseville it was often necessary to use figures for Placer County. Figures for Placer County were included where readily available.

An important point to keep in mind is that the figures used in this report are allocation figures and are not actual expenditures. There are often differences between allocations and actual expenditures.

Most data collected was for fiscal year 1979, July 1, 1978 through June 30, 1979; however, a few programs operate in other cycles. Funding cycles are noted in each section. Even with these minor differences, it appears that the amounts indicated for each funding tract could reasonably be considered as a fiscal year 1979 figure.

Definitions & Organization

The term "Human Services" is the latest of a long list of terms used to describe activities involving the well-being of individuals, families, and communities. It is important to recognize that this term often strikes deep emotional chords concerning the varying values held concerning individual or collective responsibility for well-being. The term also raises another deep seated issue, that of the differing feelings concerning the social and political devices to be employed in achieving well-being.

In the earlier days of this country, the discussions and activities concerning well-being were confined to limited areas, such as: helping widows and orphans and providing charity. In the last thirty years the discussions and activities of well-being have exploded almost beyond the capability of any single descriptive phrase. Today there are a number of highly organized governmental and voluntary efforts in almost every jurisdiction, both urban and rural.

The problems of the "widow and orphan" have now been joined by a multitude of problems and conditions. The earlier spector of hunger, illness, and disability that threatened a few have been replaced by hazards which make almost anyone vulnerable. Permanent crippling injury, accident, or long term illness can strike anyone. Birth defects, mental illness, and family breakup occur in families at all levels of income. Instabilities in the economy can change a strong local economy into a stagnant pool of unemployment almost overnight.

Deep social changes have caused these hazards to become common to every person and family. As a result, the provision of human services, which was once limited to an extremely narrow area, has become a virtual necessity if the well-being of the entire community is to be maintained. Thus, human services comprise an extensive and intricate variety of services to a vulnerable portion of the community. This vulnerable portion represents a minority of the total community at any given moment, but can be drawn from any part of the community, from the strongest to the weakest and from the poorest to the richest.^{1/}

For the purposes of this report, a broad definition of human services is used in order to show the extent of activities designed to maintain the community well-being. Human service is considered to be:

"Any program, service, or activity designed to support or assist individuals or families in meeting their human or social needs."

The information for this report was gathered based on this broad definition and was organized into twenty (20) funding tracts. These tracts are based to a large extent on the State Office of Planning and Research (OPR) Human Service Classification System. The OPR system was modified; however, in order to more clearly show the funding flows, allocations, and services of local government and United Way organizations.

Analysis

Human service allocations included in this report total $491,841,708 or an average of $464 per person for every resident of Sacramento, Yolo, Sutter, Yuba, and Placer Counties. In Sacramento County the average is $499 per person, in Yolo County it is $373, and in Yuba-Sutter Counties it is $423. On a daily basis, the average allocation is $1,347,512, on a weekly basis it is $9,432,584 and on a monthly basis it is $41,772,872. ---

The provision of the broad range of human services covered by this report is a significant economic force in this Region. With some minor exceptions, for the period of July 1978 - June 1979 a total of $491,841,708 was allocated to this area by federal, state, and local governments and by private agencies and organizations. This is $101,358,237 higher than the combined budgets of Sacramento, Yolo, Yuba, and Sutter Counties. Allocations for Human Services in Sacramento County exceeded the total county budget by $58,786,554 and in Yolo County by $4,320,681. In Yuba-Sutter Counties the combined county budgets exceeded the combined human service allocations by $332,891.

The impact of this economic force is immense, particularly since most of this money flows directly into the local economy in the form of salaries and wages, rents and leases, utilities, food and supplies, and direct transfer payments to clients. Only a small fraction of this flow of funds is diverted for long term capital expenditures or is held for contingencies.

A simple example may help to understand this economic force. If a plant located in this Region has 500 employees and they are paid an average of $20,000 per year, the total payroll would be $10,000,000. The amount allocated for human services in this Region could support 49 plants such as that.

The distribution of the allocations for human services among jurisdictions in the Region follows the expected pattern. Allocations within Sacramento County amount to 75.7%, Yolo County 8.1%, and Yuba-Sutter 8.3%. The remaining amount is divided among Placer County, the City of Roseville, and regional programs.

The distribution among funding tracts indicates that the largest allocation was made to Public Assistance and Social Services, with 32.3 percent of the total. Next came the Counties with 14.1 percent; however, this figure is a little misleading because counties also provide matching funds for many programs and have also allocated general revenue sharing funds to human service programs. Next in size is Housing and Community Development, with 11.7 percent, and Employment and Training, with 11.4 percent. Overall, these four funding tracts account for 69.5 percent of the total.

The division of allocations between public and private agencies is shown in Summary A and B of Table 3 and in Table 3. Summary A shows the division between public and private by funding tract, Summary B reviews the division within local jurisdictions, and Table 3 is the detail funding tract analysis.

The public sector is allocated a majority of the funds, $458 million in the public sector to $33 million in the private sector, or 93% to 7%. The large allocations to the public sector for Public Assistance and Social Service, Employment and Training, Child Nutrition, Cities, Counties, Education, Housing and Community Development, and Mental Health are the main reasons for the size of the public sector allocation total.

In fifteen of the twenty funding tracts there are allocations to both the public and the private sectors, while in three of the tracts there are allocations only to the public sector. In two other tracts, only the private sector received allocations.

An attempt was made to determine the number of agencies, departments or organizations that are allocated human service funds. In addition, an attempt was also made to determine the total number of grants, contracts, or budget allocations made to the agencies, departments, or organizations identified. It should be carefully noted that within each funding tract an unduplicated total was derived; however, it was impossible to develop an unduplicated grand total. The grand totals used are simply the numerical total of the various funding tracts.

Using the data provided, the total number of agencies, departments, or organizations receiving allocations is 672. Of that, 353 are private and 319 are public. These 672 organizations received 1,432 grants, contracts, or budget allocations, with 405 going to the private sector and 1,027 going to the public.

It is interesting to note that the private sector has more agencies, departments, or organizations receiving grants, 353 to 319, but they receive far fewer grants, contracts, or budget allocations, 405 to 1,027.

The significance of this is that the private sector agencies receive a much lower average of total allocations than do the public agencies, $94,000 to $1,433,000. Also, average allocation size by activity is lower in the private sector, $81,000 to $445,000. It must be noted that these averages were calculated using grand total figures and that within funding tracts the averages fluxuate widely.

The grand total figures indicate that on the average, each private agency, department or organization receives 1.2 allocations, while the public agencies receive 3.2. Again caution should be exercised in using these figures because they were calculated using grand total figures and the averages will fluxuate within each funding tract.

An analysis of the source of funds for human service allocations indicates that services are primarily financed by taxes generated by local, state, or the federal government.

AGING

AGING

The Office of Human Development Services (OHD), Department of Health, Education, and Welfare is responsible for the operation of most of the programs in the area of aging. Basic aging programs are authorized by the Older American Act of 1965, as amended by the Older Americans Act of 1978, Public Law 95-478. Responsibility for operation of Community Service Employment is shared with the Department of Labor.

The State Department of Aging has overall responsibility for administering the State's programs for the elderly, while the Area 4 Agency on Aging (A4AA) is responsible for programs in the SRAPC Region. A4AA is the locally designated agency responsible for developing a coordinated and comprehensive system for the delivery of services.

Title V Programs are administered through a national grant to the Nation Retired Teachers Association/Association of Retired persons. ACTION programs are administered through direct grants to local service contractors. AB998 is administered by direct grants from state agencies to local service contractors.

Assistance for the basic aging programs is in the form of project grants to designated agencies, who can enter into contracts with local service providers. Local nutrition programs must provide a hot meal at least once a day, five days per week or more. Beneficiaries of these programs are older persons aged 60 and over, and their spouses, especially low income and minority older persons.

ALCOHOLISM

ALCOHOLISM

The Department of Health, Education, and Welfare; Alcohol, Drug Abuse, and Mental Health Administration is responsible for administering national alcoholism programs. National programs are authorized by a variety of legislation, including the Comprehensive Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism Prevention, Treatment, and Rehabilitation Act of 1970, Public Law 91-616, as amended. This national formula grant program provides funds to the State to plan and establish programs for Alcohol Prevention, Treatment and Rehabilitation.

The State Office of Alcohol and Drug Abuse is responsible for the administration of State Alcoholism Programs and for allocation formula funds to County Alcoholism Programs. This office is also responsible for allocating State general funds to Counties and to special projects.

The County Alcoholism Programs are responsible for County operated alcoholism programs and for programs contracted to local contractors.

Beneficiaries of these programs are people in local communities in need of prevention, treatment, and rehabilitation services for alcoholism and alcohol abuse.

ANTI-POVERTY

ANTI-POVERTY

The Community Services Administration (CSA) is responsible for the operation of the "Anti-poverty" Program. The CSA is authorized by the Economic Opportunity Act of 1964, as amended by the Community Services Act of 1974, Title II, Public Law 93-644.

The CSA uses Community Action Agency's (CAA) as the prime mechanism for implementing programs. A CAA must be designated by local government and can be a unit of local government, a separate public agency, or a non-profit organization.

Assistance is generally in the form of annual project grants to designated CAA's, who can contract for services. Beneficiaries of these programs are low income individuals and families of all ages, in both urban and rural areas. CSA issues poverty guidelines each year for eligibility purposes.

CHILD DEVELOPMENT & PRE-SCHOOL

CHILD DEVELOPMENT AND PRE-SCHOOL

The Department of Health, Education, and Welfare, Social and Rehabilitation Service is the federal agency responsible for child development programs under Title XX of the Social Security Act. The program is designed to provide a healthy growing environment for young children while their parents attain self-sufficiency through employment or employment training.

The State Department of Health Services is the state agency responsible for Title XX funds; however it allocates the child development monies to the Department of Education, Office of Child Development, who in turn provides the funds to public agencies for child care services and to public and private agencies for pre-school programs.

The Office of Human Development Services, Department of Health, Education, and Welfare, is the federal agency responsible for the Headstart Program. The program is authorized by the Community Services Act of 1974, to provide health, educational, nutritional, social, and other services to economically disadvantaged pre-school children. Headstart funds are provided on a 80% federal, 20% local match to local public or private non-profit agencies, such as the Sacramento Area Economic Opportunity Council and the Economic Opportunity Commission of Yolo County, who administer the program in the SRAPC area.

California county government is responsible for operating and administering a vast array of state mandated programs and public services. This wide scope of responsibility given to county governments is matched by a number of optional programs counties voluntarily decide to operate.

Examples of mandated programs are: agricultural education and protection, air pollution control, animal control, care in State Hospitals, drug abuse prevention and rehabilitation, family support, fish and game control, hospital care, juvenile delinquency prevention, mental health services, probation, public guardian, public defender, state correctional schools support, weights and measure protection, and welfare and social services.

Optional programs include: economic development, cultural activities, libraries, and parks and recreation.

Funding for these programs, both mandated and optional, come from numerous sources, including; fees, federal grants, state funds, federal revenue sharing, and the county general fund.

CRIMINAL JUSTICE AND DELINQUENCY PREVENTION

CRIMINAL JUSTICE AND DELINQUENCY PREVENTION

The Law Enforcement Assistance Administration, Department of Justice provides assistance for law enforcement and crime prevention programs. Assistance is authorized by the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968 as amended, and the Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention Act of 1974.

The State Office of Criminal Justice Planning (OCJP) receives this federal grant money, which requires matching funds; to support a variety of programs, including internships, fellowships, and planning, construction, and technical assistance grants to facilitate prevention of crime and upgrading of the criminal justice systems.

The California Council of Criminal Justice is responsible for the state's Comprehensive Criminal Justice Plan. The OCJP acts as staff for the Council and prepares the plan; outlining goals and priorities for the State and allocations to its 21 Criminal Justice Planning Regions.

Region D, Sacramento Area Criminal Justice and Delinquency Prevention Planning District is responsible for the planning and allocation of criminal funds in the Sacramento area.

DEVELOPMENTAL DISABILITIES

DEVELOPMENTAL DISABILITIES

The Department of Health, Education, and Welfare (HEW) is the federal agency responsible for the operation of programs for the developmentally disabled. Within HEW, three major services are administered. The Social and Rehabilitation Service administers the Title XX Program which has a developmentally disabled component, the Office of Human Development administers the Developmental Disabilities Basic Support Program, and the Social Security Administration administers the Supplemental Security Income Program.

These federal programs are authorized by the Social Security Act, Title XX, the Developmental Disabilities Services and Facilities Construction Act, as amended by the Developmentally Disabled Assistance and Bill of Rights Act, Public Law 94-103, and by the Social Security Act, as amended by the Social Security Amendments of 1977.

At the State level, the Department of Developmental Services is responsible for the administration of programs for the developmentally disabled. The Department of Developmental Services contracts with the Alta California Regional Center to provide services. The Regional Centers provide some direct services and contracts with local service contractors for services to specific clients.

The State Council on Developmental Disabilities is responsible for developing a plan for utilization of formula grants under the Developmentally Disabled Assistance and Bill of Rights Act. At the local level, the plan is developed by the Developmental Disabilities Area Planning Board III. Formula grant funds are used for planning, administration, and services.

Services provided thru the Regional Center and thru local service contractors cover a comprehensive range and are available to persons with developmental disabilities attributable to mental retardation, cerebral palsy, epilepsy, or autism.

DRUG ABUSE

DRUG ABUSE

The Alcohol, Drug Abuse, Mental Health Administration, Public Health Service, Department of Health, Education, and Welfare provides major federal assistance for drug abuse programs. Drug Abuse Programs are authorized by the Drug Abuse and Treatment Act of 1972, Public Law 92-255.

The Drug Abuse and Treatment Act provides State and Local Assistance to reach, treat, and rehabilitate drug abusers through states and community based services.

The State Office of Alcohol and Drug Abuse receives the federal funds in two sections: Section 409, to assist the state in preparation and implementation of projects for the development of effective drug abuse programs; Section 410, to provide funds for drug abuse programs through counties, who in turn contract with community agencies or provide services directly. The state also provides additional funds authorized by the Short-Doyle Act.

EDUCATION

EDUCATION

The Department of Health, Education and Welfare, Office of Education, is responsible for the administration of federally supported education programs. Authorization comes from a number of acts. For Bi-Lingual education the authorization is the Bi-Lingual Education Act, Title VII of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965, as amended; for college work study the authorization is the Higher Education Act of 1965, Title IV, as amended; for vocational education it is the Vocational Education Act of 1963, as amended by the Title II of the Vocational Education Act of 1963, as amended by the Title II of the Education Amendments of 1976; for basic educational opportunity grants it is the Higher Education Amendments of 1976, Title IV; and for federal impact and it is the Federally Impacted Areas, Title I and IV.

Most, but not all, of the programs are administered in California by the State Department of Education. In these programs the distribution of funds is normally done by the department. In programs operated by HEW through direct grants or contracts with local school districts or educational institutions, the allocations are determined by HEW.

Eligibility for programs vary, but normally priority is given to educationally or economically disadvantaged persons.

EMPLOYMENT AND TRAINING

EMPLOYMENT AND TRAINING

The Employment and Training Administration, U.S. Department of Labor is the Federal Agency responsible for administering most employment and training programs. The most significant federal programs are the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act of 1973 (CETA), as amended, The Older Americans Act Title IX, and the Youth Employment and Demonstration Projects Act of 1977 (YEDP), as amended.

The Region IX Office of the Department of Labor contracts directly with designated prime sponsors in counties with a population of 100,000 and over, and with the State Employment Development Department (EDD) for counties of less than 100,000. This Region has two prime sponsors, one in Sacramento County and one in Yolo County.

Prime sponsors are responsible for developing a coordinated and comprehensive manpower plan, while the balance of State Counties work with EDD in developing their plans. Prime sponsors and balance of State Counties usually operate CETA and the YEDP Programs.

The basic objectives of all Department of Labor contracted programs is to provide job training and employment opportunities for the economically disadvantaged, unemployed, and underemployed. This is accomplished through a variety of programs.

Assistance is in the form of grants to prime sponsors and to EDD based upon a formula which takes into account unemployment and the number of low income and disadvantaged adults. Prime sponsors generally operate some programs themselves and contract out other programs. Most public service employment programs are operated by the prime sponsor or local governments. Beneficiaries of these programs are unemployed, underemployed, and economically disadvantaged persons.

FAMILY PLANNING

FAMILY PLANNING

Federal responsibility for Family Planning services are centered in the Department of Health, Education and Welfare. The Social and Rehabilitation Service is responsible for Family Planning Services supported by Social Security Act (Title XX) funds and the Public Health Service is responsible for services supported by the Public Health Service Act, as amended, (Title X).

Title XX funds are administered in California by the State Department of Social Services; however, through an interagency agreement, the Department of Social Services provides 1.7% of the total State Title XX allocation to the State Department of Health Services, Office of Family Planning for Family Planning Services. The State provides matching funds for the Title XX allocation and the Office of Family Planning uses the total amount to contract for services within each county.

Title X funds are direct grants to local contractors or local governments for educational, medical, or social services necessary to enable individuals to freely determine the number and spacing of their children, to promote the health of mothers and children, and to help reduce maternal and infant mortality.

Beneficiaries of these services are persons who desires family planning services and who would not otherwise have access to them. Priority is usually given to persons from low income families.

HOUSING & COMMUNITY DEVELOPMENT

HOUSING AND COMMUNITY DEVELOPMENT

The Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) is the federal agency responsible for administration of Housing and Community Development Programs. There are numerous programs designed to assist in providing housing. Among the more significant are: Public Housing-Low Income Housing Assistance, authorized by the Housing and Development Act of 1965, as amended; and Section 8 - Housing Assistance payments for Lower Income Families, authorized by the Housing Act of 1937, as amended by the Housing and Community Development Act of 1977.

Each of these major housing programs provides assistance to low income families in obtaining decent, safe and sanitary housing. Each of these programs offers assistance to low income families by paying a portion of their rent. Eligible families must meet low income guidelines.

At the local level, these housing programs are usually operated by public housing agencies, which are a part of local government or are authorized by local government participation in joint exercise of powers agencies. Some programs, such as Section 8, are operated by the HUD Local Insuring Office.

There is one basic community development program, with two major divisions, which provides most of the federal assistance. The Housing and Community Development Block Grant (HCDBG) program provides entitlement or formula grants to major urban cities and counties, and discretionary or competitive grants to successful small city and county applicants. Funds awarded under either the entitlement or the discretionary program can be used for a wide range of community development activities; however, both programs are designed to principally benefit persons of low or moderate income.

Local cities and counties are the only eligible applicants for these programs. Cities and counties receiving either entitlement or discretionary grants usually provide some of the activities themselves and contract for other portions with local contractor services.

MENTAL HEALTH

MENTAL HEALTH

The Department of Health, Education, and Welfare, Alcohol, Drug Abuse and Mental Health Administration is responsible for administering national mental health programs. Mental Health Services are authorized by a variety of legislation; however, two important federal authorizations are the Social Security Act, Title XIX, as amended and the Public Health Services Act, as amended by the Community Mental Health Center Amendments of 1975, Title III, Public Law 94-63.

At the State level, Mental Health Services are supported under the Short-Doyle Act, as amended, and are administered by the State Department of Mental Health.

Assistance is normally in the form of grants to county mental health departments, who often contract with local service providers. Beneficiaries of mental health programs are persons who need services and reside in designated service areas.

PUBLIC ASSISTANCE AND SOCIAL SERVICES

PUBLIC ASSISTANCE AND SOCIAL SERVICES

Social Services (Title XX)

The Office of Human Development Services, Department of Health, Education, and Welfare is the designated federal agency for awarding social services funds to state agencies. The authorization to administer Social Services (Title XX) is derived from the Social Security Act, Title XX, Public Law 95-171.

The Office of Human Development Services awards Title XX funds to the state on the basis of the State's comprehensive annual services plan and an state administrative plan. The State allocates Title XX funds to County Welfare Departments to administer the various mandated and optional social service programs.

Title XX assistance enables the County Welfare Departments to provide social services to public assistance recipients and low income people.

Public Assistance

The Social Security Administration (SSA), Department of Health, Education, and Welfare is responsible for setting general standards, monitoring programs, and awarding public assistance funds to states. The SSA is authorized by the Social Security Act of 1935, as amended, by the Social Security Amendments of 1977.

The SSA provides financial aid to State and County Welfare Departments on the basis of the HEW- approved State Welfare Plan, compliance with federal regulations, estimates of public assistance, and administrative costs.

Public Assistance provides a source of relief to needy families with dependent children, emergency assistance to families, and assistance to the aged, blind, and disabled.

REHABILITATION

REHABILITATION

The Department of Health, Education, and Welfare, Office of Human Development Services is the federal agency responsible for rehabilitation services and facilities. The basic support program is authorized by the Rehabilitation Act of 1973, as amended. Federal funds are allocated to the state on a population basis.

Another source of federal funds is the Social Security Act of 1965 as amended. Under this program, services are provided to social security disability beneficiaries for vocational rehabilitation services.

At the State level, the State Department of Rehabilitation is the designated agency which administers rehabilitation programs. The Department of Rehabilitation administers local programs thru district offices. In this Region, the Sacramento District Office serves: Sacramento, Yolo Placer, El Dorado, and Alpine Counties. The Chico District Office serves: Sutter, Yuba, Colusa, Glen, Butte, Siskiyou, Modoc, Shasta, Lassen, Tehama, Trinity, Plumas, Sierra, and Nevada Counties. The district offices receive funds based upon population and the number of disabled persons.

The Department of Rehabilitation also administers the Facilities Grant Program, which provides public and private non-profit rehabilitation facilities with funds to originate or expand programs. In addition, grants are made for innovation, expansion, and for workshops.

Services provided cover a wide range, from diagnostic to vocational training and to restoration surgery. Services are available to persons with a physical or mental disability, which results in a substantial handicap to employment, and where a vocational rehabilitation service may reasonably be expected to benefit the individual in terms of employment.

REVENUE SHARING and GENERAL FUND

REVENUE SHARING AND GENERAL FUND

General Revenue Sharing

The Office of Revenue Sharing, Department of the Treasury is responsible for the operation of the General Revenue Sharing Program. The authorization for revenue sharing was established by the State and Local Fiscal Assistance Act of 1972, as amended in 1976.

The General Revenue Sharing Program provides a return of a portion of Federal tax revenue to states and local units of general purpose government. Local governments receive funds based on a formula incorporating factors of previous tax effort, population, and relative income. The General Revenue Sharing funds may be retained by the local jurisdiction for its own use, or it may allocate the funds to community organizations.

The City Councils and Board of Supervisors set guidelines and approve allocations after taking requests and recommendations from the City Manager, County Executive, citizens groups, and community organizations.

General Fund

The General Fund monies generated by cities and counties provides the main source of support for operating activities.

Community organizations may apply for funds to support special programs or activities. Requests are reviewed by staff and recommendations forwarded to the governing body for approval.

TRANSPORTATION

TRANSPORTATION

The Department of Transportation, Urban Mass Transit Administration (UMTA) is the federal agency responsible for administration of transportation programs. Most federal mass transportation programs are authorized by the Urban Mass Transportation Act of 1964, as amended, Public Law 88-365.

Public entities designated by the Governor and local officials are eligible for formula grants to assist in financing acquisition, construction, improvement, and operating costs. Applicants submit an application to UMTA, the Governor, and to the Metropolitan Planning Organization, which in the Sacramento Region is SRAPC.

At the State level, assistance for mass transportation is generated through Transportation Development Act (TDA) funds, which are a portion of the sales tax that is designated for mass transportation.

In the Sacramento Region, the major transit operator is the Sacramento Regional Transit District (SRTD), which receives major UMTA grants and TDA funds for system operation. In addition, the City of Sacramento provides SRTD with an annual subsidy.

UNITED WAY & COMMUNITY FUND

UNITED WAY

Local United Way organizations represent the involvement of the private, voluntary sector in social service concerns. United Way organizations are responsible for fund raising and allocations, as well as for evaluating how the funds are used.

Local United Ways take the lead in obtaining financial assistance for service agencies through "fair share" giving, employee payroll deductions, and an annual campaign effort.

The distribution of funds to member agencies is based on a determination of community needs and performance evaluations of the agencies.

Conclusions & Recommendation

"Its a complicated subject for many reasons: We have no commonly understood definition of Social Services; no one knows how much money is now being spent for what services nor what is the magnitude of unmet needs; current funding mechanisms are incredibly diverse and fragmented; private as well as public funds from three levels of government are involved; eligibility for services varies from program to program; bureaucracies are bickering with each other over jurisdiction; administration conditions attached to appropriations are a "puzzlement" to even the best informed; and so it goes on and on."

This statement by the Policy Committee on Social Services of the American Public Welfare Association describes the national picture, and unfortunately, the local condition. Locally, as in other areas, programs have been established independently and usually designed to provide a single service. Each program determines its own eligibility requirements, locations, staffing patterns, and service approaches. Programs usually establish strong vertical lines of responsibility from local programs to funding sources.

This pattern of service establishment and operation has resulted in some general problems of human service delivery:

- . Fragmentation: separate organization and administration of services due to location, specialization, duplication or lack of co-operation.
- . Inaccessibility: obstacles for a person trying to obtain services, such as restrictive eligibility criteria, location of service, or lack of information and publicity.
- . Discontinuity: obstacles to clients moving from provider to provider to obtain multiple services.
- . Unaccountability: lack of communication between client and service organization decision-makers and between local service organizations and local elected officials.^{1/}

These general problems of human service delivery are further compounded by specific problems of fund allocation which further confuse the situation and hamper improvement:

- . Human service programs, which have been authorized by a wide variety of legislative mandates, are governed by differing regulations, plan and allocate funds on inconsistent timetables, and rarely attempt to coordinate activities.
- . The complexity of the flow of funding for human service activities and the overlap of federal, state, local and private activities contributes to a void of information concerning the overall organization of human services. There is no single source of information describing the organization of programs operating within a jurisdiction and their source of funds.

- . There is no county-wide plan which matches funding allocations with needs and priorities. Each service sub-system responds to its own perceived needs in isolation. Few attempts have been made to develop a comprehensive human service delivery system which would meet the total needs of an individual, family, or community.
- . Human service funding allocation processes are often highly political and highly charged, and local agencies seek and are often granted allocations based upon their writing skills or their ability to exert political pressures.
- . There is a lack of local accountability within the human service system because many service agencies have no local funding sources, because there has been a failure to define roles and responsibilities, and because no local agency or unit of local government has assumed a leadership role.
- . There are no local registration, licensing, or business permit requirements for human service agencies.

From a local perspective, the major problem facing human services is the lack of a process which provides a framework for resource allocation based upon local needs. One of the reasons this local framework has never been developed is the confusion over roles and responsibilities.

Local government, which has been asked, and often forced, to take on more and more human service activities, has been wary and rightly so. Local governments have been urged to "pick-up" and expand programs under pressure from newly organized constituencies that often include both program clients and staff. As some local elected officials put it, "Federal and State promises usually mean local commitment".

Local government is the level of government closest to citizens, is in public view, and is usually expected to solve local problems. Based upon this view of local government by citizens and the pressures from State and Federal government, it seems inevitable that local government will continue to be a central figure in the human service arena.

The challenge facing local government is how it will exercise its role to shape the various services into an effective system in order to achieve social ends for the community well-being. If it is to do this, it must stop being a passive administrator of mandated programs passed down from above and become a catalyst for joint action by the local public and private sectors. Local governments must begin to view human services as a fundamental objective and take a strong guidance role to ensure that local needs are met.

RECOMMENDATIONS

1. County government, which receives a significant majority of human service funds, should act as a catalyst and focal point for coordinated human service planning and allocation activities by bringing the various funding sources into a partnership to meet priority needs.

Human Service Funders Roundtables should be developed by Yolo County and jointly by Yuba-Sutter Counties as a mechanism to allow human service funding agencies to share information and coordinate planning, allocations, and program operations. Staff support to these roundtables and to the existing Human Service Funders Roundtable in Sacramento County should be provided by County staff, preferably from the County Executive's Office.

2. Local jurisdictions with large human service programs should consider development of a community human service management planning process, to provide an overall guide for human services within their jurisdiction, which would include:
 - . Community needs analysis
 - . Community goal setting
 - . Community resource assessment
 - . Community priority determination
 - . Community objective determination
 - . Coordinated resource mobilization and allocation
 - . Periodic progress reporting
 - . Annual program evaluation
3. Each county should assume the responsibility for collecting and disseminating comprehensive information concerning human service funding as part of their annual Title XX Social Service Plan preparation. Each human service funding agency should be asked to provide complete and up-to-date information on all funds channeled into a county.
4. Local jurisdictions and private agencies should promote consistent multi-year planning and funding cycles at the Federal, State, and local levels in order to encourage long range planning and reduce the amount of time spent on applying for funds.
5. Local human service funding sources should adopt a uniform request-for-proposal (RFP) process and should use a consistent application form.
6. Local jurisdictions should request that human service programs operating in their area provide them with copies of all program applications or project proposals which are funded, including complete funding information.
7. Local jurisdictions should explore the implementation of a registration, licensing or business permit requirement for human service agencies similar to existing retail business permit requirements.

It is important to note that all of these recommendations are based upon local action and if implemented, improvements would occur at the local level. This emphasis on the local level is based upon the results of prior studies which indicate "The capacity for complex, fully coordinated administrative action among federal agencies... was tested and found to be limited."^{2/} These studies have also described the difficulty of trying to get cooperation from Federal and State "Functional Fiefdoms" and how this disunity undercuts and destroys coordinative efforts.

If improvements are to be made in the provision of human services, it will only come through strong local action, with local government providing the leadership for these efforts.
